Dear Mr Mary - I received your letter yesterday about the money for Mr Martineau - but I had sent off the "Festival" money to Mrs Chapman, & after two months of hard work had many small accounts to pay & had to settle in hand that I was obliged to borrow £40 at 5 per cent, thereby & thereby Mrs C. would prefer there should be no delay in depaying the debt. Accordingly I sent a draft to Lombard's on Friday for £40-16. but made no remark about the difficulty I had in "raising the wind." I expect to be in full funds shortly when my own accounts begin to come in. But I am always in haste to pay what I can as soon as I can, so as to be out of debt out of danger. My friend who lent the money is rich & lent it willingly & as I offered interest can well take or lend it. In a general way I have plenty of cash for all demands as one, but happened at that time to be in a low position at my bankers.

A few days since Mary Rathbone sent a letter to my wife to be forwarded ~~to~~ (as I was LOOC suspected) with additions of any news to me, enclosing in Ohio. Accordingly the note & I sent to Lombard's the which under personal secret. He dont seem to care if we do take pains to square big Bacon to own as he may perish - for which I like him ole the better. He seem to me have been always ready to give as good he got or as soon threatened in the way of hard blow. He do hate the Catholic priests & the Irish Americans "desperadoes" - and loathes Buchanan & the Southern Democracy in general.

Yours affectionately

With your thanks for so kind as to open the letter for Miss Schuster, I send in which it is left to her - making the writing on blue paper (which Rachel tore from) an above-postcard, ~~I take for you~~ & charging the postage to me. I am sorry to give you this trouble. The mistake was not mine - but was made by one who is far nearer perfection than I am.

One of the Surrey Cricketers who had some particulars of "Oshen" from me authorises me to go as far as £20 for his benefit - but I do not mean to say any thing of this to him tho I hear from you. Meantime - ah I see confirming my first impressions as to his perfect integrity. He talks a good deal of his bad life - but
